A SENTRY IN SKIRTS.

During one severe season some forty years ago—a winter remarkable for its long and inclement frost, experienced with equal rigor throughout Italy, France and Germany, where the largest rivers were rapidly congealed, and people seen to fall dead with cold—in the Franch town of Metz, a poor sentinel was sent upon guard on one of the bitterest nights, when a fierce north wind added to the usual cold. His watch was in the most exposed situations was a support of the property of the grant watch was in the most exposed situation. His watch was in the most exposed situation of the place, and he had scarcely recovered from a severe indisposition; but it is found that if bunched and sold when he was a soldier and declared his readiness to take his round.

It chanced that he was betrothed to a young woman in the same city, who no sooner heard of his being on duty than she began to lament bitterly, declaring it to be impossible or him to survive the insuferable severity of such a night, after the illness under which he still lingered.

Maddened at the idea, and heedless of consequences, she hastily clothed horself as warmly as she could, ran out of the house situated not far from the place of the watch, and with the utmost courage arrived alone at the spot. And there she indeed found her poor soldier, nearly exhausted as she had imagined, being with difficulty able to keep his feet, owing to the intenseness of the frost. She earnestly conjured him to hesten, though only for a little while to revive himself at her house, when, having taken some refreshments he might return, but aware of the sonsequences of such a stee, this he vines, from the years and the other sgain in September. A Big Thing in Telephones.

Bridgepert (Ct.) Samdard.

A representative of M. Fortin-Herrmann, the inventor, writes from Parie, May 21, to P. T. Barnum, of this city, as follows:

I presume that you will have read, in the political or special papers, of Mr. Fortin-Herrmann's newly invented cable. This cable allows to telephone to any distance in the world; and for this reason, as well as on account of its special durability, it has been adopted by the French Government. By the same cable an "audition" of the Paris Grand Opera has been transmitting to the King of Belgium in Brussels. I am of opinion that in transmitting the Paris Grand Opera every night to America, say to New York, would be a profitable business. The cost of cable from Paris to New York, allowing 200 persons to hear at the same time, as distinctly as if they were in the Paris as distinctly as if they were in the Paris as distinctly as if they were in the Paris of cable from Paria to New York, allowing 200 persons to hear at the same time, as distinctly as if they were in the Paris Opera House, would be about $15,000,000. Let us say that they will be charged for hearing one act $50 anily, which will make for 200 persons $1,00 for each act; this will make for four acts (there are many operas with five acts), $1,000 every night, say $1,450,000 a year. This sum is highly sufficient to cover the interest and amortization on the invested capital; and as the parformance at the opera takes four hours the remaining twenty hours of the day may be used for business and other telephonic communications between Europe and America, which in fact will constitute the main profit. Are you in-clined to take this business up with your financial friends?

I am at your disposal for all further information.

Jules Grunker,
Representant de M. Fortin-Hermann.
Mr. Barnum has ordered his Paris agents to investigate this matter, and if found practicable as represented, he will be one of fifteen to take the stock in the new cable company for the purpose proposed. Kitchen and Market Garden.

Frequent hoeings greatly promote the growth of cabbages and cauliflowers. Early cabbages, when nearly mature, often burst open. This may be prevented by bending over the plants, and thus root-pruning by breaking off a share of their roots. Look to late cabbage plants in seed beds, and do not let them crowd or get drawn up.

"Suppose I can do it with impunity," said the soldier, "is it noble or dishonorable thus to abandon my post without anyone on guard?"

"But there will be some one; if you consent to go I will remain here until you return. I am not in the least afraid; so be quick, and give me your arms."

This request she enforced with so much cloquence and tenderness and so many tears that the poor soldier, against his botter judgment, was fain to yield, more especially as he felt himself becoming fainter and fainter and unable much longer to resist the cold.

Intending to return within a few minutes, he left the kind-hearted girl in his place, wrapped her in his clonk and giving her his arms and his cap, together with the watchword, and such was her delight at the idea of asving the life of her beloved, that she was-for a time insensible to the intense severity of the weather.
